PROJECT ANNOUNCEMENTS
CENTER FOR THE STUDY OF FEDERALISM

Cities of the Prairie

Research is now being undertaken to expand the Cities of the Prairie Project through: 1) in-depth case studies of selected cities and 2) a resurvey of all cities of the prairie first studied in the early 1960s to identify significant challenges and responses of the second half of the post World War II generation. Works-in-progress include: a study of the relationship between economic and political power in Rockford, Duluth and Davenport by Benjamin Schuster; studies of political change since 1963 in Champaign-Urbana by Rozann Rothman; Decatur and Springfield by Stephen L. Schechter; Joliet by Joseph Zikmund II; and a study of the political development of Pueblo, Colorado by Stephen L. Schechter.

Medium-Size Cities

This project involves selected studies of a neglected side of urbanization and city politics in civil communities which are neither large metropolises nor small towns but medium-size cities of 50,000-150,000 inhabitants. One currently funded project involves a comparative and historical study of the political development of selected medium-size cities in five regions of the United States: industrial cities along the Merrimack River in Upper New England; New Rochelle, Mt. Vernon, and White Plains in Westchester County, New York; Durham, Raleigh and Chapel Hill along the North Carolina Piedmont; Springfield and Decatur in central Illinois; and, Colorado Springs and Pueblo in southern Colorado.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF FACULTY ASSOCIATE POSITIONS

The Center for the Study of Federalism has established a Visiting Faculty Associate Program for visiting scholars interested in undertaking research based at the Center. Visiting Faculty Associate positions, offered on an annual or semester basis, are non-remunerative and are intended to provide scholars who have outside means of support with a base of operations which would include:

- 1) office facilities and limited secretarial and research assistance;
- 2) access to the research facilities of the Center and of Temple University;
- 3) university affiliation; and,
- 4) participation in special activities of the Center.
